ist at the Universalist church, to take effect at the beginning of the church vacation. She will then join her husband who has located at Deering.

Sunday with the Methodists.
Sunday morning, Rev. B. Franklin Fickett in connection with the preaching service gave a short talk upon the duties incumbent upon our citizenship in the republic. The Stars and Stripes do not always wave over justice and honor.

In the evening Mr. Fickett conducted

Mr. Cyrus S. Tucker is visiting in Harrison.
Mrs. C. H. Haskell fell, the other day,
and broke one wrist.
Mrs. W. Marston and son Lawrence are visiting friends in Turner.

Mrs. Sadie Gallagher Abbott spends the Fourth with relatives in Lynn.
Mrs. Rose P. Holt of Fairfield spent several days, recently, with her cousin, Mrs. Arthur W. Frost.

Mrs. Helen E. Garretson and daughter and Miss Lee of Passaic, N. J., are staying at the Beal's house.
Mr. and Mrs. Carlota J. Channel of Boston are visiting Mr. and Mrs. John A.
Woodman of the Beal's house.

It looks like old times or as it did years ago to see the Waterford stage come with four horses and a Concord coach.

Quite a delegation of the W. R. C. of Oxford County, the Corps, Norway, Monday evening. A delightful ride in the cool of the evening, bountiful refreshments and a fine entertainment will remain long in the memories of the participants.

A. W. Allen, driver of A. W. Walker & Son's Norway stage, says that ten and one quarter tons of ice were distributed in this village, last Tuesday. This is the largest amount they ever put out in one day. We guess it was no more than the weather demanded.

Tuesday afternoon, lightning struck an oak tree standing in the Browne edge of the bank at the south side of Pine Grove Cemetery. The tree was left standing though splintered into topknots. The lightning jumped into the adjoining lot and hurled down the bank the headstone of Thomas Yeaton.

L. P. Bartlett, Jr., and son, Laurence V., and nephew, Norman Cushman, of Lynn, in company with S. H. Walcott, have been spending a few days at Bass Island. The boys have had great sport rowing and fishing for bass. Laurence while fishing for bass with a fly, caught a salmon that would weigh close to a pound. This is the first salmon that we have known to be caught, this season.

They caught a good number of bass.
There was a very pleasant gathering at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Cushman, June 20, the occasion being the 60th anniversary of Mrs. Cushman's birth. Among those present were Mr.
and Mrs. Henry O. Holden, Mr. and Mrs.
Levi E. Holden, Mrs. Augustus Everett,
Mrs. Albion Hill and Mrs. Arthur W.
Frost and son Clifford, all of Norway;
also Mr. and Mrs. Percy C. Greenleaf of East Otisfield. A very bountiful dinner was served at 12 o'clock, a feature of which was several cakes inscribed appropriately to the occasion. Mrs. Cushman received several presents, and all joined in wishing her many happy returns of the day.

School closed in district No. 11, Noble's Corner, Friday, June 28, taught by Sadie E. Millett. The number of pupils registered for the term were nineteen.
Average attendance, 15.83. The following are the pupils' names who were not absent one-half day during the term:
Eva, Ethel and Minnie Upton, Roy White, Arthur Marshall, Herman Richardson and Perley Russell. Henry Russell was absent only one-half day during the term. The ladies in the neighborhood were present in the p. m. at the closing exercises. The school having purchased a flag for the schoolhouse, last winter, appropriate "flag exercises"
were given by the school.

Norway Municipal Court.
A fine of $5 and costs was what it cost one man to commit the offense of indecent exposure.

Henry Downs and wife, George Slag and Fred Merrill went to Lewiston with a load of junk belonging to Slag. Coming back, they stopped in Oxford and Slag and Downs bought a house of Will Wing. Downs paid an old watch and 18 cents in money. Slag paid a watch that he bought for a dollar, and money that amounted to between 50 and 75 cents.
The rest of the pay for the horse was three gallons of liquor. Downs and Slag were both arrested on separate warrants charging them with selling the liquor.
Downs set up a claim that Slag owned the liquor and Slag's defense was that Downs owned it. Wing testified that Downs and Downs were both drunk and both bought the horse together, but he did not know which one had the horse.
The court reserved the decision.
There is also a case against Slag for selling liquor to another man.

Oxford County Advertiser.

NUMBER 27. JULY 5, 1901, NORWAY AND SOUTH PARIS, MAINE. VOLUME XXXII.

Rural Free Deliveries.
Rural free mail delivery started from Norway post-office, Monday morning, July 1, over two routes. The mails are large at the commencement of delivery.

Route No. 1.
Distance 24 1/2 miles; 102 houses on route; John P. Jenkins, carrier; Route:
From post-office down Main street to Thomas J. Whitman's in Oxford.
Thence westerly to Frost's Norway Lake.
Northwesterly, through Norway Lake to Noble's Corner.
Easterly to Crockett ridge.
Southwesterly to York's farm.
Northerly to Richardson place, near Greenwood line.
Back to F. Titcomb's.
Southwesterly via Crockett bridge, to Lake road.
Easterly to village and post-office.

The start was made at 8:40 a. m., and the carrier got back at 2:20 p. m., Monday.

Route No. 2.
Distance 23 1/2 miles; houses on route
120; Stephen L. Ethridge, carrier; Route:
From post-office via Main street, Bridge street and Water street to Norway Lake.
Thence via Norway Center to Swift's Corner.
To corner below L. A. Carter's and return to Swift's Corner.
To Chapel schoolhouse.
Northwesterly by Albany road to cross road
and westerly to next road.
Southerly past town farm into Yaggar.
Easterly to Hobbs pond.
Southeasterly and southerly to corner near
D. W. Goodwin's hill to village and post-office.

Starting at 10:40, the carrier had the misfortune to break his key by the horse starting when he was locking a box, and when he had to take mail it was necessary to call at houses and get keys. With that delay, he got back at 4:30.

Eli Benson has moved into the I. N.
Small house on Bridge street.
Charles Knight and family visited relatives in Bethel, a few days last week.
Samuel H. Hayden and family Haverhill, Mass., are at their cottage, The Havenhill, by Lake Pennessewassee.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy C. Greenleaf and son Joseph of East Otisfield made a short call at Mrs. A. W. Frost's, Sunday, June 30.
The farm buildings of Ernest Maxim, on Fore street, near the covered bridge in Oxford, were burned by lightning,
Tuesday afternoon.

Carolina DeFabritis is here from Boston, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Stone. Miss DeFabritis will sing at the Epworth League convention, next Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Walker Mills and family ride in a new carriage.
School in Brackett district closed,
last Friday, with a picnic at Island pond.
Grace Skillings Walker and her husband are stopping at her father's I. S.
Skillings.

Lena Stone is the possessor of a new hat. It is a Mexican sombrero, a present brought from Texas.
Ralph Haskell came home from Peaks Island, last week to attend graduation at North Bridgton. He has now gone to Springfield to work.

Harold Caswell, who cut his knee ten weeks ago while working in the wood, has been unable to work again. It does not heal as fast as it should.
The Masons held their regular meeting, Thursday afternoon, and gave a lunch to visitors. In the evening a concert was given by the Rabboni Masonic Quartet, at Grange hall, to a crowded house.

D. H. Caswell and wife from Austin, Texas, are at the old home, the Caswell place. They came last Thursday evening, last week, to see the place. They will stop for a month. Owing to business their stay will not be as long as they would like. Mr. Caswell has lived in nearly all sections of the United States also South America. He is the owner of several large cotton mills in the South and does an extensive business, one mill alone doing a business of $165,000, the last year. But he says in all the world there is no place that looks so good to him as the dear old home.

Walter Mills has a fine new surry.
Mrs. Perley is staying at Edward Hicks'.
Mrs. Fred Clark is improving in health.
Mrs. Lucetta Clute has been to Saco to visit relatives.
Mrs. Horace Barrows has gone to Portland on a visit.

Augustus Andrews has moved his family to Welchville.
Mrs. Charles Harlow from Massachusetts is visiting friends here.
N. E. Warren is doing carpenter work on George Green's new home in Bridg-ton.

Stuart & Gay have put an addition on their store which makes it much more convenient.
An enthusiastic, old-fashioned temperance meeting was held at the church, last Sabbath evening, conducted by Charles E. Stuart.

The concert under the auspices of the F. & A. M. held here, last Thursday evening, was very largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The Masonic lodge is receiving new members and is in a flourishing condition, we judge, but the members never tell anything.

Our school closed, last week. It has been under the instruction of Ethel Haskell who has the qualifications for a first-class teacher, and though this was her first term she gave good satisfaction.
The last day she served ice cream to her pupils. The prizes for spelling were awarded to Beth Scribner in the first class, Mildred Mills in the second class, Florence and Helen Clark also received prizes for constant attendance, not having missed one-half day.

ford Falls and is confined to the house by measles. Mr. Swift is sixty years old and a veteran of the Civil War and was expected to die of the measles all through life, but got well.

Alton C. Wheeler was at Woburn, Mass., last week, and saw the school committee. Of its nine members, six are natives of Maine. Out of a large number of applicants, Mr. Wheeler got the election as sub-master of Woburn high school.

Mr. Pleasant Rebekah Lodge No. 30, I. O. O. F.,

THERE ON THE TFCUMSEH

Copyright, 1900, by Robert C. V. Meyers.

She made room for him. She knew what this portended, what she had expected and for which she believed Mr. Mast was sure she was prepared. A little silence fell. They felt the throbbing of the engine. The swash of the water against the side of the boat seemed abnormally loud. The merriment on board had become intermittent or was confined to the saloon, where there was a piano.

"Miss Penfold, I think you know in what light I have long regarded you. It was Mr. Mast's voice. 'And you also know I am a plain spoken man whose faults are what they are. You know me very well, and I know you very well. We are a quiet couple, our tastes are in common, the church means a great deal to us. Will you be my wife?'"

Miss Martha had supposed tremors at her side, little irregular heartbeats preparatory to placing her hand in his. Now, feeling calm and clear minded, she turned to him.

"You have done me a great honor," she said, "and I appreciate it. I have expected it, and I have thought it over all day here, all last evening at my window." She touched his hand. "Mr. Mast, let us be friends. It would be hard to be more than that at our time of life anyway."

He understood her, but he jerked his chair away a foot or so.

"Don't be annoyed," she said. "I respect you more than any man I know or have ever known. I shall always so respect you. And I hope you will let me go on beside you in the church work—in any way I can be of service to you. That is all."

He did not reply for awhile. His face was set. Then he spoke.

"I had expected another answer from you," he said. "I felt that you gave me the right to expect another sort of answer." He rose abruptly and left her. The dove over her head made a mournful sound. All at once a terror seized her. What had she done? She had given up a good man, a man who would have cared for her and protected her. Had she made a mistake? Had he asked her two days ago what would he have done if she had said yes? Would he have gone away before she was restored to calmness. In that time she had been joined by some of the women who had understood the intimacy between her and Mr. Mast, who had seen the short confabulation and wished to ascertain results. But Miss Martha adroitly turned the talk to church matters. When the women left her, she staid there alone. Helena and Maxwell came round to her.

"Gordon said yesterday it might be a bad day," Helena said triumphantly. "Didn't you, Gordon? And a storm is coming. There's a drop of rain. Come with us, aunt, and see what a sea is driving toward us!"

"I am not lonely," Miss Martha said sharply. "Go away, please. Go and be happy."

The captain reported that they might get to shore by 9 o'clock, but they should have to slow down a little. The weather had come on so nasty.

At 8 o'clock it was pitch dark, and wind and wave contended. The boat rose as though it would never come down again, and then it sank and shivered. The water lashed over the sides. One could see the white of it rise out of the blackness like long, then slip in grasping at nothingness. The nearly oozy stretches over the deck. Nearly everybody was in the saloon, and the dove over her head annoyed her, but Miss Martha staid where she was. She sheltered herself from the rain under one of the hanging small boats and waited. She believed she had waited all day. And now it was 8 o'clock. There was only one hour more to be on the boat, and as yet she had not seen Borland. For she owned it to herself that that was what she had wanted, what she had waited for—to see him and assure herself that she had not deeply wounded him yesterday when she had said "the cruellest woman in the world."

Here she was with a happy party of people, just asked in marriage by the clergyman of her church, and there he was down in some dismal depth of the boat, maybe a stoker, a blackened workman, and yet she longed to see him. Was it only for what she thought it was that she wished to see him? She had not satisfactorily answered that question to herself when she was dimly aware that a commotion had been going on round her for some minutes. There was no throbbing of the engine. Had it stopped and were they drifting in the fog?

And how bright the lamps were. Lamps!

"Fire!"

The word seemed to burst from a hundred throats at once.

Miss Martha started to her feet. At the same moment a man rushed across the deck as though in search of some one. When he saw her, he ran that way. It was Borland.

"I thought of you at once," he said. "There is no danger. You will all get off. I raked out the fires from under the boilers. There will be no explosion. But we have been burning since 3 o'clock."

"You thought of me first of all," she said.

Then Mr. Mast had run up. "Miss Penfold," he said, "do not be frightened."

"I am not frightened," she answered. "Attend to the others. You, too," she said to Borland.

There were screaming, weeping, praying all round her despite the captain's firm assertion that all would get safely off. She saw Borland and Mr. Mast unchaining the small boats and swinging them out on the water. She went there.

"Let me stay here," she said. It was said afterward that she who had been known as a most timid woman worked alongside of the boat hand with courage equal to his, quieting people, preventing overcrowding of the boats and helping the timid women and children whom Mr. Mast went and marshaled.

The captain did heroic work until he fell and broke his arm, but it was Borland who seemed in control, his name on the lips of them all. It was "Dan! Dan!" all the time.

The story of the burning of the Tecomseh and the saving of every soul on board but one is newspaper history. The story of a man and woman there is not.

Helena, fainting, was carried across the deck by her lover.

"Look!" said Miss Martha to the man beside her. "Take her!"

Borland caught the girl in his arms. A word more would tell him all that he wished to know, all that he hungered for. Miss Martha spoke the word. In the smoke and confusion, while Maxwell looked for a rope which should bear him and Helena to the boat below, she said, "Kiss her." Borland's face went down to that of the unconscious girl's. It was but for a second, and then he was lowering her into the boat, a look of exultation in his eyes.

"Now, brave woman," said the minister, taking Miss Martha by the arm. The deck was smoking, and a shower of sparks was round them. But Miss Martha repulsed him and turned to Borland.

"You go," she said. "You told me yesterday you could not swim."

"Dan!" said the captain.

Borland lifted her in his arms and carried her to the side of the boat.

"Dan," she cried, "you thought of me first of all today! I never forgot you in all my life!"

"Hush!" he said. "I understand, dear girl, and thank you."

"Guss, Dan," she hurried on, "you guessed the truth. Helena is your daughter, born six months after her mother separated from you. Helena does not know, and I promised Margy you should never know. I have broken my promise to her. But I was revengeful yesterday. I knew what you wanted me to tell you. I never forgot you!"

He placed his face to hers as he had done to his daughter's.

"Helena shall never know," he said, "and I am so glad—you don't know how glad. Margy will forgive you—poor"

The small boat was making good head way and was some distance off.

Margy!" And then Mr. Mast had come up and taken her from him and slid with her down the rope to the crowded shell below, which with his massive strength he pushed away from the larger craft.

"With all your might!" he yelled to the men about him. "Pull, or we shall be swamped when she goes down."

"Helena shall never know!" What voice whispered those words? Miss Martha had fallen exhausted across the lap of a woman.

"Helena shall never know!" She sprang to her feet. On the deck of the huge vessel in the intense light she saw two men.

"The captain is always the last to leave a boat," some one said, "but our captain is lame. Dan is putting a rope around him."

The small boat was making good headway and was some distance off.

"Look!"

Dan, the boat hand, had run a rope under the shoulders of the crippled captain and had swung him over the rail in the wake of the boat that afterward pulled him in.

"Look!"

Dan, the boat hand, had spied the dove in the cage. He had it down at the rail. He looked over the water. There was a broken sea. The force of the waves, the backward sweep, was tremendous even for an expert swimmer to fight against, and one of the watchers in the small boat knew that Borland could not swim.

This watcher was strangely calm. Her eyes were fixed on a man who had come bravely, a man who a little while back, amid the horror and confusion, had said "Thank you" to a woman who told him she had never forgotten him, told him she had never forgotten him, told him she had never forgotten him.

The minister was speaking, "Miss Martha, brave woman, I will not take the answer you gave me today."

But her eyes were set on the burning boat. It rose magnificently on the crest of a huge swell. Then, seeing the man so plainly, so far above her, Miss Martha's voice rang out like a trumpet:

"Dan! Helena shall know! Dan!"

He surely heard her, for he turned his head in her direction. There was a flash in the light. He had opened the cage door and set the dove free. Was that his answer to her? Then he called. No one else seemed to hear, but she was certain that he called. She would always be certain of it—"Helena!" and last of all her own name, "Dan!" And then the fire crimsoned over him, the boat dived downward, the flame went out, and the water hissed over the place where the boat had been.

Nervousness and Nerve.

The more nervous a man is, the less nerve he has. That sounds paradoxical—but it isn't; for Hood's Sarsaparilla gives nerve. It tones the whole system, perfects digestion and assimilation, and is therefore the best medicine a nervous person can take.

How Are Your Kidneys?

Dr. Hobbs' Stomach and Kidney Pills, S. M. P. free. Add. Sterling Remedy Co., Chicago or N. Y.

A Word of Protest.

In a city paper of June 20, appears a photograph, and a well-written and high-sounding description of the new school-house at North Waterford.

I appeal to the columns of the ADVERTISER as being likely to reach the attention of those most interested. The old schoolhouse burned on Jan. 8, 1900, was 28x32 feet in size. After some years, it was raised, and another room, the same size, built beneath.

Imagine a room scarcely larger than this, divided in the center by a partition, and you have the size of the new house.

I think the New York architect would see a somewhat modified result of his original plan. Every village, like an empire, has its rise and fall, but we trust we have not fallen so low in the scale of civilization that we cannot appreciate anything like modern advancement, as that article implies.

When the plans were presented, every sensible person knew there would not be room enough, and a retransference signed by every man in the district, was presented to the committee. But an existing jealousy in a town divided against itself, forced the remonstrants to give way to the will of the majority, and the present structure was built.

The wisest among the ignorant knew the outcome of such a building, built entirely without drainage, and as they prophesied, when the spring rains fell, the basement was filled as if it had been a receptacle to hold water. Two "poor table" closets had been built in this basement, which menaced the health and comfort of the school, and several times had caused a dismissal of the session.

Last spring the sight of that basement was both "pathetic" and "ludicrous." Everyone who saw it laughed, and wanted to cry, as the water was baled out to save the new furnace from destruction.

A different sanitary arrangement had immediately been made, which is scarcely less deplorable.

The writer of the article referred to above may have meant that this was the only school building "laying the least claim to modern architecture" and not "the only building" in town. The owners of several nice modern dwellings, built since the fire, which add greatly to the beauty of our village, might take exceptions to this assertion. Unless the windows had been placed in front, "through the carelessness of a physician," the scholars sitting in the outside row of seats, in the north room especially, would have been unable to see on a dark day.

The schoolhouse is built, and silent submission is for us to cultivate, but those who went to school in the "barn like structure with windows on four sides" cannot forget the large, airy room, from whence went many noble men and women who have reached high places in life, or the tender associations that clustered around that building. None of these can cast aspersions upon the old schoolhouse, which was convenient and commodious, large enough for exhibitions, lyceums, singing schools, fairs and prayer-meetings. All these gatherings have no place in the present building.

Uncle John French has placed a fine monument on his new lot in the cemetery. He has the best lot in the cemetery.

We saw a call for town meeting to see if the town will vote to ask the county commissioners to lay out a road on the side of Pike Hill. Now in our judgment it is a far better location for a road where the old road now is than a highway side hill could possibly be. If we are to pay out our money for a road let's put it out where we can have a level one.

C. A. Frost is working for F. D. True, the wholesale grocer of Portland, on his farm in Poland. There are twelve buildings on the farm which contain over four hundred acres. The house is a three story hip roof with a three story bay window and a broad piazza on three sides. The floors are now being shelled and varnished. Mr. Frost is boarding with Newell Foster who runs the farm for Mr. True. Mr. Foster lived in Norway when a boy. Mr. True's residence is on high land in plain sight of the Poland Spring House, the hotel on White Oak hill, West Poland, and a large number of farms and residences.

He also has a telephone connected with his house. Mr. True has interests in some of the corn shops and is president of the Poland butter factory. Mr. Frost will finish work for Mr. True, this week.

Much Reading For Little Money.

The New York World has got the cost of printing down to a minimum. Its latest offer of its monthly newspaper-magazine is interesting if from no other cause than that it shows the acme of "how much for how little."

The Monthly World is a 32-page magazine with colored cover. Its pages are about the size of the pages of the Ladies' Home Journal, and it is copiously illustrated in half-tone. The illustrations are the result of the best artistic skill, aided by all the latest printing-press appliances, making a magazine unrivaled in the quality of its contents and its appearance.

Each issue contains stories of romance, love, adventure, travel; stories of fiction and fact; stories of things quaint and curious, gathered together from all over the world; the results of scientific research, and editorial reviews. It numbers among its contributors the leading literary men and women of the day.

A feature each month is a full-page portrait of the most famous man or woman of the moment in the public eye.

In collecting and preparing for publication the literary matter and art subjects for the Monthly World no expense is spared.

The New York World will send six numbers of this newspaper-magazine on receipt of fifteen cents in stamps. Address The World, Publisher Building, New York.

The next meeting of Oxford Pomona will be at West Minot on the first Tuesday in August. Program:

Opening in 5th degree. Conferring 5th degree. Woman's half hour. Question—How can a farmer and his family live for vacation? Opened by Sister J. R. Beane of West Minot Grange.

Recreation. Merton and Lizzie Brigham, West Minot. Question—The saying true that life is what we make it? Opened by S. M. Bean.

Music furnished by local Grange.

Mr. Israel A. I value that preparation more highly today than I did when I first published my statement, and that is over three years ago. To my personal experience I can add that of many others in this city who one and all coincide with me in saying that Doan's Kidney Pills act as represented."

If you spent a year of your life in growing tulips, you would know more about tulips than most gardeners.

If you spent a dozen years you would be a tulip specialist; if you spent a quarter of a century you would be horticulturally famous.

Now we have spent all these periods combined in growing and testing coffee. One year made us know coffee, twelve years more made us coffee specialists, a quarter of a century added to that produced Chase & Sanborn's Seal Brand.

Orville D. Clough of Bethel has had his pension increased, $17.

William W. Moore, Brownfield, has had an increase of pension, $14.

The Rickers of Poland Springs, the B. & M. and C. Railroad people are to furnish the Maine room at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo.

There is to be an auction of standing grass at the C. E. Green place on Plummer Hill, Waterford, next Thursday, July 11, at 2 o'clock p. m. See bills.

Your correspondent from Brownfield would like to know why the Baltimore Orioles are of two colors. I can tell him. The yellow is the female and the other is the male.

The farm buildings of Edwin E. French in Albany were struck by lightning, Tuesday afternoon, and burnt. But little of their contents were saved. No insurance. Loss $1,000 to $1,500. A horse was lost.

At one o'clock next Wednesday afternoon, there will be an auction of standing grass and a field of oats at the Jesse H. Field farm near Island pond in Waterford. Grass sold in lots to suit purchasers. A mowing machine will be sold at the same time.

A Quotation often Heard.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." This is often quoted as Scripture but it is not although it would not mar the Scriptures if it had been in them from the beginning. Bacon once said, "Cleanliness of body was ever deemed to proceed from due reverence to God." In my reading I not long ago came upon the following, "According to Dr. A. S. Bethelheim, rabbi, this is found in the Hebrew fathers. He cites Phineas ben Yain as follows: 'The doctrines of religion are resolved into carefulness; carefulness into vigor; vigor into abstemiousness; abstemiousness into cleanliness; cleanliness into godliness'—literally next to godliness." "Cleanliness is indeed next to godliness," John Wesley (quoted) Journal, Feb. 12, 1772.

We do not object to hunting or searching the Scriptures, nor rather we urge it, but it may interest many to know where the above expression came from.

B. S. RIDGOUT.

Monday morning, June 10, none of the delegates to the National Editorial Association were visible about the hotel, the headquarters, but soon after breakfast I was interviewed by two men from Hot Springs, Arkansas, who were soliciting votes for holding the 1902 meeting of the N. E. A. in that place. They were F. C. Stearns, president, and C. F. Cooley, secretary and manager of the Business Men's League of Hot Springs, and they were hustlers. When I said I was from Maine, Mr. Stearns quickly responded that he was a Maine man himself—an Oxford Bear. That settled it, and I at once pledged my vote and influence in behalf of Hot Springs, and was adorned with a handsome badge in blue and gold from which was suspended a Hot Springs crystal. That badge and an occasional introduction brought me in touch with the whole Arkansas delegation, including their young lady editor and publisher in whom they feel a just pride; and all extended hearty greetings to the man from Maine. How those fellows did work! The hotel was transformed into a picture gallery, and all the pictures were of Hot Springs. Illustrated booklets, badges and crystals were lavishly distributed, and those who did not wear a Hot Springs badge were the exception. Leaville, N. O., also wanted a visit from the Association in 1902, but the North Carolinians were not in it with the hustlers from Arkansas, and the modest circulars they put out attracted little attention.

ANDOVER.

Concert, Wednesday evening, by Prof. Chapman and his company.

Baccalaureate exercises were held in the Congregational church on Sunday, June 30, of the Andover high school. Sermon by Rev. G. B. Hannaford. A large attendance.

Rev. W. F. B. Jackson and family of Providence, R. I., arrived at the Gregg house, also Geo. French and son of Nashua, N. H., and Mrs. Nichols of Charleston, Mass.

WEST FRYEBURG.

S. O. Wiley attended the Chapter meeting at Bridgton, last week.

Stephen Farrington visited his daughter, Mrs. F. E. Emery, a few days ago, at Lovell.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Tarbox of Fryeburg called on friends in this vicinity, last week.

Many from this section will probably attend the Fourth of July celebration at North Fryeburg.

Mrs. H. W. Stevens is much improved in health, being able to carried on the piazzas of her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Meserve entertained friends from their recent home neighborhood, last Sunday.

Chester Lewis of East Conway passes through this place on Mondays soliciting and delivering orders for groceries.

It is pleasant to see our respected townsman, Stephen Farrington, in his accustomed place with improving health and strength.

Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Manchester of Lowell, Mass., with their family are at their summer home, Camp Kiat, on the Ridge Road just over the state line.

E. R. McIntire has lately purchased an extensive tract of timber in Chatham, N. H., and has a crew of men peeling bark. Mr. McIntire is one of our enterprising young men.

The long continued heat is a source of frequent comment. "Only one hundred and five in the shade," is quoted as the register of the thermometer, Friday. "The man with the hoe" found it extremely uncomfortable under the full blaze of the sun.

Hon. Paris Gibson of Great Falls, Me., called upon Mr. and Mrs. Howard Jones during his stay in this vicinity. Mrs. Jones made the acquaintance of the Senator while a resident in the home of her sister, the wife of John Swett, M. D. of Great Falls.

The Stirling Literary Club met, Tuesday, the 25th, at the home of the president, Mrs. S. O. Wiley. A pleasing program of which two numbers at least merit special mention—a paper upon the Evolution of the Newspaper by Mrs. Elmer Walker and an essay upon Club Duties by Mrs. Howard Jones. Mrs. G. H. Wentworth read a selection which was a plea for loving consideration for the aged in our homes. Mrs. H. D. E. Hutchins recited a thrilling poetical selection and also sang an old time favorite song. At the close of the meeting the hostess served a collation of strawberries and cream, delicious bread, cake, and coffee. Mrs. Howard Jones will receive the club at her new home in East Conway, N. H., Tuesday, July 9th.

MASON.

Fred Wheeler was over from Grover Hill, Sunday.

Robert Cushing is sick at his son's, Douglass Cushing's.

Lyman Chute of Harrison was in town, Saturday and Sunday.

George Briggs and daughter Nina were at Addison Bean's, Sunday.

Walter Strickland was up from West Bethel, Sunday, on his wheel.

Lightning struck a pine tree near A. G. Lovejoy's in the shower, Saturday.

Mrs. Alice Ordway of Gilead was in town, Saturday, buying eggs for the Gorham market.

Eli Grover went to Norway and Bolster's Mills, Saturday, to bring Charley Dunham home for laying.

Ervin Hutchinson is the new cream collector here and down to Bethel by way of West Bethel, taking in all the farmers along the route.

Harry Blanchard of New York, N. J., is building a camp on the old Tyler place in the west end of the town, which will outdo all the others in the valley.

J. Hastings Bean and wife and George Briggs and wife of South Paris rusticated at Camp Comfort under Haystack mountain several days, the past week.

Eight of the Epworth League of the Methodist church of Bethel held services at the church here, last Sabbath. We hope to see them again in the near future.

Mrs. Addison Bean has a cosset sheep which she was offered $10 for, last Friday, but refused, in March she dropped twin lambs which sold in June for $8. The wool brought $1.44, making $9.44 and has the sheep left.

We have had two of the heaviest thunder showers on record. Friday and Saturday, there seemed to be a double shower both days, one from the south and one from the north, which met in this valley. The water came down in torrents. Hailstones large as birds' eggs fell, both days, but no damage was done to crops that we have learned.

WOODSTOCK.

CEASE DISASTER.—During the heavy shower, Saturday afternoon, the farmer killed three head of cattle belonging to Wilfred Smith, and two head for Eli Noyes, taking Mr. Smith's two cows.

Monday morning, Albert Felt started out with a subscription paper and after night he had $50.00 for Mr. Smith. Victor Bicknell went out with a paper, but we have not learned of his success.

Fannie Whitman has finished working for Mrs. R. C. Davis.

Emerson Billings is getting his stable most completed. It will be ready for the hay.

Mrs. Russell, the mother of Mrs. Abbie Russell, is very feeble, not expected to live.

Edith Cushman is the happy possessor of a new Waverly bicycle, a present from her father.

Alton Bacon is doing quite a job of carpenter work for G. Q. Perham, in putting in dormer windows and some other work.

SOUTH WATERFORD.

Mrs. Mary Green died, June 29. Winton Clark is here visiting relatives. The board of health has authorized free vaccination.

Maud Bell is staying for a few days with Mrs. Edith Pike.

Frank Noble is having dormer windows added to his house.

Lizzie Wood of Harrison, formerly of Waterford, is ill requiring physician.

B. Sanborn is intending to have a hard-wood floor laid in his diningroom.

Mrs. Addie Farwell and daughter are staying at J. S. Cheever's, Mrs. Farwell's old home.

Frank Howard and Leon York went over to Kezar river, a few days ago, and got 150 trout.

No plans for the observance of the 4th of July excepting a demand for a few bunches of firecrackers for the boys and an extra allowance of bananas, ice cream and lemonade for all.

The Grange sermon delivered by Rev. H. A. Philbrook at the hall, June 30, was very instructive and appropriate, the text being, "Break up your fallow ground and sow not among thorns."

There was a large audience.

HARBOR.

Orrie Stanley visited relatives in Lovell, recently.

Rev. E. Doughty and W. L. Howe were in Portland, Saturday.

BY WIND OR WAVE.

Newly Invented Motor, Constructed in a Peculiar Manner.

A novel motor, illustrated and described by The Scientific American, has just been patented by Marcin Puszkarski of New York city.

From a central driving shaft a number of arms radiate, which serve to carry vane. Of these vane each has one end pivotally attached to the outer end of one of the arms, so that it can swing freely. Stops are movably secured to the arms and arranged to project into the path of the vane to bring them into driving connection with the arms. Bars are splined transversely on the arms and are operatively connected with the stops. A collar or ring normally engages the ends of the bars, the ring being provided with alternating elevations and depressions. The collar is locked by means of a lever. A stop lever is arranged to engage the projecting portion of the lock lever to unlock the collar whenever desired.

By means of this lever mechanism the collar can be made to rotate with the arms, or it can be thrown out of gear, so that the bars will sink into the depressions, thereby stopping the motor.

The vane, as our illustration shows, are of peculiar construction. Each vane consists of a rectangular frame to which a cover is secured. To this rectangular frame canvas covered side frames are pivoted so that they can fold inwardly. At the pivotal or outer end of the vane a folding canvas cover and end frame is attached and is operated by a balancing frame likewise covered with canvas. The vane is pressed by the current against the stops. When the vane approaches a position directly in line with the wind, they are swung around on their pivots partially by the action of the wind on the end frames. This action is counterbalanced by the balancing frame, thereby preventing the vane from swinging around too soon. The vane range in the direction of the wind, the several frames folding against the main frame. Against the current the vane present a narrow edge and therefore offer little resistance, automatically preserving a direction parallel with the current until they strike the stops again.

Utilizing the Sun's Heat.

The sun's heat has been harnessed at last. Dr. William Culver of Washington has invented the necessary apparatus, according to Pearson's Magazine. In the inventor's laboratory, or "sun power yard," as he prefers to call it, there are in all 1,600 small mirrors, arranged on frames of different sizes, the largest holding 810 mirrors and the smallest 23. Each mirror has been found capable, by actual thermometric measurement, to reflect from 10 to 15 degrees of heat, according to the location of the sun, the angle of the mirror and the heat or warmth of the day. With all the mirrors in use, therefore, a total heat of some 24,000 degrees is generated.

In the ordinary way Dr. Culver never uses more than one or two of his mirror frames simultaneously; in fact, unless required to melt down a mountain of stone or to perform some gigantic operation of the kind, he would hardly have cause to do so. The sun rays are focused on a piece of highly burnished metal, shaped like the smooth inside of a washtub, only much larger. A piece of wood, three feet in length and an inch across, drawn soaking from a barrel of water and thrust into the reflected rays dries in about a half second and in another half bursts into flame.

Each of the mirror frames operates a heliometer of its own. The heat, like ice, may be stored up indefinitely, for use in cloudy weather. The heat reservoir is a round metal tank, not unlike an ordinary gas storage tank, filled with a combination of minerals and fitted with tight sliding doors. The heat is absorbed by the minerals and may be drawn off when required with as much ease as beer is drawn from a cask.

Large Pupils Healthier.

Some school statistics collected with a view to testing the truth of Dr. F. Smedley's statement that the average large pupil is brighter than the average small one have been published. Seven thousand pupils were examined to obtain statistics as to a basis for comparison. The result of the examination of the comparative school standing of strong and well formed pupils and those whose nutrition had been defective was surprising. The rule of a sound mind in a sound body was startlingly demonstrated and was proved to work with mathematical accuracy.—Chicago Record.

HE WAS SLOW.

Wherefore He Was at First Saddened, but Later Was Pleased.

She had solemnly promised to be his'n. She had promised it in the sunshine, under the moonlight, in summer and winter, and he had never doubted that she would be true. A number of years had fled since first she promised, but when a young man is working on a salary of $15 a week it takes fleeting years to get together the furniture necessary to furnish a four room flat. The time came when he could hope. He had got enough for two rooms and was thinking they could rent the other two out to a party of plain and homelike tastes when he called one evening to discuss the matter with Britomart. He found her cold and distrustful, like a dog viewing a cat on top of a 12 foot fence.

"Dealing, what is it?" he asked as he sat down beside her.

"Nawthin much," she answered as she shrank away from him.

"But I must know. I demand to know. You are not usually like this. What has happened?"

"Only a trifle."

"Ah, that relieves me! But what is the trifle?"

"Well, I got married this afternoon to Joseph Bones."

"My God, girl, but do you know what you are saying?" he shouted as he sprang up. "You can't mean it! You are testing me. Throw your weight on me and tell me that my ears have deceived me."

"But you were so slow," she sighed, "and I thought seven years long enough to wait. Please don't feel bad. Yes, we were married this afternoon, but I will be a sister to you."

"Will you, though?" he asked, with tears in his eyes.

"For sure."

"And you won't expect me to send up bouquets?"

"Not a one."

"Nor theater tickets nor boxes of candy?"

"Not at all."

"And I can have my evenings to knock around with the boys and save enough out of my salary to get square with my laundry bill?"

"You can."

"Then shake! You are a noble girl, and if I ever win anything on the race you shall come in for half. False tales to me, who loved and trusted you so, and yet—shake again! I'm off to see the town by gaslight. Ta, ta!"

Somebody gave the boy a dachshund. The boy's father doesn't like dogs.

"How did that cut get into the house?" he shouted when he caught sight of the long, low, rakish canine.

The boy hesitated. He didn't want to lose the dog.

"He looks as if he might have come in through the water pipe, daddy," he said, with an anxious grin.

He still has the dog.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

What are Humors?

They are vitiated or morbid fluids coursing the veins and affecting the tissues. They are commonly due to defective digestion but are sometimes inherited. How do they manifest themselves? In many forms of cutaneous eruption, salt rheum or eczema, pimples and boils, and in weakness, languor, general debility. How are they expelled? By which also builds up the system that has suffered from them. It is the best medicine for all humors.

Told By a Laramie Man.

The Strange Way in Which He and His Arabella Were Reunited.

We had been talking about the generally humdrum lives led by nine out of ten, and the sad-eyed man who had hitherto kept silent said as he settled back into his chair and put his feet on the rail of the hotel piazza:

"From my birth to the present time I have had but one thing happen to me that was in the smallest degree unusual, and that related to my marriage, which was a little out of the ordinary."

He spoke with a sleepy drawl that piqued curiosity, and I asked him to tell us what happened if it wouldn't interfere with his nap. He smiled and yawned and said:

"I was born and brought up in Laramie, Wyo., and so was Arabella. Arabella is my wife. I had known her all my life and had always loved her, and she had done the same by me, and the course of our affections ran as smooth as molten metal. In 1899 I decided to marry her, and the day was set for April 25, and we invited all our friends and looked forward to happy but commonplace wedding."

"Just one week before the ceremony I was called up to North Dakota on a business matter which I did not think would detain me more than three or four days."

"Arabella did a little weeping on my shoulder, womanlike, and said, 'What if you never come back?' But I said, 'Now you know perfectly well that I always have been as regular as clockwork. It's only a few hundred miles away, and I'll be back and we'll be married exactly at 4 o'clock on April 25, and it will be the least exciting and yet happiest wedding that ever took place."

"I went up to North Dakota and the last ten miles of my journey I had to make on foot. While I was walking along it began to snow, and inside of an hour a blizzard was raging, and I had to put in for shelter at the house of a lone stranger named Smithson, who kindly gave me supper and told me that it would be suicidal for me to go any farther, that a Dakota blizzard, the last one of the season, but perhaps the worst, was upon us."

"When can I return?" said I. He told me that if the blizzard was a real energetic one it would be two weeks before I saw home and mamma. You may imagine my feelings. Hundreds of miles from Arabella with less than a week intervening before our marriage, and no way of getting word to her! Of course she would think me faithless."

"I told the stranger my troubles, and he sympathized with me, but said that no human being could live out in that storm, and when I looked out of the window I believed him. It was terrific. I had been in the New York blizzard of 1888, and it was a sultry summer's day to this one."

"There was nothing to do but to grin and bear it. Maybe it would stop sooner than my friend thought. He might be an alarmist, but it grew worse, and by next morning it seemed to be only just beginning to get better. I had to wait just what the thermometer recorded for fear of being considered an exaggerator. The snow fell at the rate of a foot an hour on the level. The house was soon covered up, and we would have smothered in time if my friend had not happened to have a tin ventilator that ran fifty feet up in the air for just such an occasion."

"Not to make a long story, it was five days before the snow stopped, and then we were snowed in to the depth of fifty feet. And we were down to our last loaf of bread. But the thing that worried me most was the fact that it was my wedding day. I sat in the pitch darkness, for our oil had given out, wondering what Arabella would do when I didn't turn up. Suddenly we heard a voice coming down the ventilator. Smithson groped his way to it."

"Who's there?" said he.

"It's the parson. Have you food enough?"

"No, indeed," said Smithson. "We are down to our last loaf. How are you able to be about, parson?"

"Why, this is the queerest storm that ever happened. All Dakota north of us is covered, but yours is the last house in the track of the storm. South of here the ground is perfectly bare, so I hatched up and brought some provisions along and drove to the edge of this mighty snowbank, and then I put on my snowshoes and climbed up. It's lucky you had such a long ventilating pipe. How are you going to get out? Shall I drop some food down the pipe?"

"Smithson told him that we not eaten anything for ten hours, and we were beginning to get up an appetite, and the next minute a bundle of pork and beans was dropped down to us."

"If you can tunnel south of your house for 20 feet, you'll come out on clear country. I'll go home and get my shovel and dig toward you, and you ought to get out soon."

"Smithson thanked the dominie, and we tackled the baked beans, and they tasted like Neapolitan ice cream. Then we felt like working. But I was feeling pretty serious, because I knew that Arabella was beginning to worry. However, I fell to with a good will, and after two hours of hard work we met in the snow tunnel, the minister and me, and a minute afterward we walked out to open air and saw the strangest sight that could be imagined."

"North, as far as the eye could reach, the country lay covered fifty feet deep with an Arctic snowfall. South of us the grass was just beginning to show green, and skunk cabbage were already pushing up through the earth. And in front of us stood the parson's lonely house, with a box of a church next door to it and not another building in sight."

"We grasped the parson's hand and told him he was a white man if ever there was one; and then I asked him what chances there were of my being able to get back to Laramie."

He told me that the road to the station was completely blocked, and it would be two days before I could get through. Two days! I instinctively pulled out my watch. It was 3.50. "Ten minutes, parson," said I, "my wedding will be due in Laramie, and Arabella is even now waiting for me."

"He was expressing his sympathy when we heard a roaring noise, and Smithson said: 'Run for your lives! A cyclone!'"

The three of us instinctively dived into the snow. Then we heard a muffled roar, and the earth shook and it was all over. Just to make sure, we lay in the snow for a few minutes, and then we crept out. Such a scene as met our gaze! The church and the parson's house were the only movable things that hadn't moved. Trees were leveled on all sides and the plains in front of us were full of debris from various States. Just in front of me were half a hundred crates of eggs, whipped to an omelet by the wind, a bunch of bananas, a white horse and a library of books, labeled Chicago Library. And stuck in the snow bank was a woman in a gray travelling dress. The parson pulled her out, wondering if it was a neighbor, but I, catching sight of her face, recognized her as Arabella! Arabella! Arabella! I was married!

"Of course the next day's papers all over the country had full accounts of the awful cyclone that had struck Laramie and had run northeast into the Dakotas, but not a word about Arabella except the fact that she was missing and her mother was frantic."

"Now you may say that it was her woman's love that guided her on the back of the storm to where I was, but even if so it was a remarkable occurrence."

"In a minute she opened her eyes, and then she sat up, and then she saw me. She was always quick to take in a situation, and she held out her arms to me. I kissed her just once for luck, and then I looked at my watch. It was 3.50. 'Parson,' said I, 'the church is standing.'"

Chester Garland went to Jackson on Sunday and returned, Monday. Lorenzo Mills went fishing with a party of friends on Walker Pond. Charles E. Perkins of Wells was recently the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Stott. Nellie Atherton of Massachusetts has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. John E. Stott. John Wiley and wife and Ethel went to Glen Station, Saturday, the 22d, to visit friends. Walter and Orin Sanborn, who have been to Sanbornville for the last three months, are in this place. Warren French of Porter village and son, Charles, were here yesterday by the guests of their cousin, Wm. H. French. An Italian from Boston with a hand organ stayed over Sunday. He says this makes the 23rd year that he has passed through this place. Sidney Bell and Maggie Chambers attended the graduation reception at Fryburg, the 18th, also Miss Osgood and Carroll Wakefield. Miss Osgood graduated at Fryburg Academy, a few years ago. There was a Grange meeting for the school children at Center Conway, Saturday afternoon. Charlie Atherton was very kind. He took a barge and two horses and carried the teacher, Miss Osgood, and scholars to it. They report a fine time. All received a treat of ice cream and all kinds of nice cake. Such times are a great treat to the children as their privileges are more limited than they are in more thickly settled places.

Heartburn.

When the quantity of food taken is too large or the quality too rich, heartburn is likely to follow, and especially so if the digestion has been weakened by constipation. Eat slowly and not too freely of easily digested food. Masticate the food thoroughly. Let six hours elapse between meals and when you feel a fullness and weight in the region of the stomach after eating, indicating that your stomach and bowels are not doing Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and the heartburn may be avoided. For sale by Noyes Drug Store, Norway; F. A. Shortell & Co., South Paris. 27-30.

"Don't Speak to me."

All manner of extravagant expressions are possible when a woman's nerves are overwrought. The spasm at the top of the wind pipe or bronchial tubes, "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart, laughing and crying by turns, muscular spasms (throwing the arms about), frightened by the most insignificant occurrences—are all symptoms of a hysterical condition and serious derangement of the female organs. Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom only. The cause, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Lewis Says: "I Feel Like a New Person, Physically and Mentally."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For years I had ovarian trouble and suffered everything from nervousness, severe headache, and pain in back and abdomen. I had consulted different physicians, but decided to try your medicine, and I soon found it was giving me much relief. I continued its use and now am feeling like a new person, physically and mentally, and am glad to add one more testimonial to the value of your remedy."—MRS. M. H. LEWIS, 3108 Valentine Ave., Tremont, New York, N. Y.

Writing to Mrs. Pinkham is the quickest and surest way to get the right advice about all female troubles. Her address is Lynn, Mass. She advises women free. Following is an instance:

Mrs. Haven's First Letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I would like your advice in regard to my troubles. I suffer every month at time of menstruation, and flow so much and for so long that I become very weak, also get very dizzy. I am troubled with a discharge before and after menses, have pains in ovaries so bad sometimes that I can hardly get around, have sore feeling in lower part of bowels, pains in passing it; have leucorrhoea, headache, fainting spells, and sometimes have hysteria. My blood is not in good condition. Hoping to hear from you, I am," MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (June 8, 1899.)

Mrs. Haven's Second Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for what your medicine has done for me. I suffered for four years with womb trouble. Every month I flowed very badly. I got so bad that I could hardly do my work. Was obliged to sit or lie down the most of the time. I doctored for a long time, but obtained no relief. I began using your remedies—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier, Sensitive Wash and Liver Pills—and now feel like a new woman."—MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (Feb. 1, 1900.)

$5000 REWARD

Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, Mass., a sum of $5000, which will be paid to any person who will show that the above testimonial is not genuine, or were published before obtaining the written special permission. Tables were set in the grove and filled with everything eatable one could wish for. The teacher, the league and the parents spared no pains or labor to make the day a success, and most certainly feel well pleased with their effort. Nearly three hundred people were present. The music was furnished by the school. The rain was very welcome for it was much needed.

Hamilton-Whittemore.
The marriage of Alroy Thaxter Hamilton of Auburn to Sadie Abbye Whittemore of Hebron was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Abbye S. Whittemore, Wednesday, June 25, at a half after seven o'clock, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. F. E. Newport, pastor of the Congregational church of Oxford. The ceremony was performed in the presence of immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties, the ring service being used.
The wedding march was from Mendelssohn and was played by Edith M. Whittemore, a sister of the bride.
The bride was ushered in upon the arm of her oldest brother, Samuel J., who gave her away. The party was further attended by M. Helen Smith as bridesmaid and Horace K. Whittemore as best man, both of Auburn.
The parlor, in which the ceremony was performed, was filled with beautiful flowers, and a horseshoe of white roses was suspended from the evergreen arch under which the bride stood during the taking of the vows. The whole house was open and prettily decorated. The bride was attired in white organdie muslin gown with Hamburg insertion, the finish of the corsage and the skirt with knife-plating edged with white baby ribbon. A handsome bouquet of bride roses was carried. The bridesmaid was becomingly dressed in white muslin over light blue. Light refreshments were served. The presents were many and beautiful.
After refreshments the bride exchanged her toilet for traveling. Her suit was of light brown. The couple was accompanied to Auburn where they took the Pullman for parts unknown. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton will make their home in Auburn.

Among the out of town guests in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hamilton, Mrs. W. A. Knight, Ivis Hamilton, Charles Chadsey, Grace Whittemore, L. E. Rich, H. K. Whittemore, M. Helen Smith and Yerna M. Whittemore.

UMBRELLAS.
Since May 1 we have sold 500 umbrellas, more than all the other stores in Norway. We surely should not have sold so many if we had not offered the best umbrellas for the money in Maine. Our goods come from the largest wholesale house in the world. Their buyers are experts who select the best quality goods the world can supply for the money. Our goods will wear longer than what you get at other stores.
J. K. CHASE,
Beal Street, Norway.

HOT WEATHER
Calls loudly for cool wear. Shirt Waists are more popular than ever. Comfortable, pretty and reasonable.

THOMAS SMILEY,
NORWAY, MAINE.

Flannel and Crash Suits were invented for man's comfort in hot weather. Our flannel suits are cool and neat looking. The coat is unlined, the trousers are made for either suspenders or belt. They are in stripes with blue or gray groundwork. They will cost you $3, $6 or $7, as you prefer. Our crash suits have all the good points found in crash goods. Suits from $2 to $4. Crash pants and duck pants, $1.00 to $1.50. Odd vests. Are you wearing one of our shirt waists?

H. B. FOSTER,
OPERA HOUSE BLOCK. NORWAY, ME.

NORWAY MUNICIPAL COURT.
George Slag was fined $50 and costs for selling liquor to Charles Tucker, and in default of payment was sent to jail for thirty days.
The Wing cases against Slag and Henry Downs are not yet disposed of.
A young girl was ordered sent to the Industrial school at Hallowell, last week, but as that institution was full a temporary arrangement was made for her.
Fred M. Mosher of North Waterford left his cart out over night and a gang of boys hauled it off going part way down the hill with it and leaving it. He said a half dozen of them arrested. They didn't deny doing it and the court fined them $2 apiece and costs for malicious mischief.
